Nicollette Sullivan Launches Another Insidious Jazz Attack with New Single “Strychnine”

VENICE, CA - Electric, and nonetheless exquisite, jazz singer, songwriter, and performer, Nicollette Sullivan, has officially released her second single, “Strychnine”. Alongside the already available pre-orders for her upcoming album Nicollette, her soon-to-be hit single “Strychnine” was released globally on March 19th by For Artists Records and Unable Music Group. After finding tremendous success in streaming and radio with her first single, “Sweet Dreams”, where she covered the Eurythmics’ classic in her jazzy style, Nicollette’s newest single can now be streamed on a large array of platforms including Spotify, Apple Music, Tidal, Amazon, and more. “Strychnine” is also presented as the second of the three “instant gratification tracks” for those fans who pre-order her album on iTunes or on her website, NicolletteSullivan.com.

The swampy, dark, and edgy vocals in Nicollette Sullivan's "Strychnine" will lure you into an atmosphere of uneasiness and intrigue. The track features the haunting saxophone renditions of perennial studio musician Doug Webb. As with her first single, “Sweet Dreams”, Nicollette continues to incorporate a unique mix of jazz, R&B, and pop into her new releases. Integrating elements from her feminine and fiercely bold vocal style, Nicollette has created a brand new face of jazz and blues for young artists and listeners. Sullivan currently sits at #39 on the DRT Independent Top 150 Radio Airplay Chart and #147 on the DRT Global Top 200, just above “In Your Eyes” by The Weeknd and Doja Cat. Her FM Radio campaign for “Strychnine” will begin later this week, where she will build upon her already substantial radio audience of about 7.5 million listeners per week.

As a strong advocate for women in the music industry, Nicollette was recently featured on the cover of the March ‘Women’s History Month’ issue of Pump it Up Magazine, following in the footsteps of many other exceptional female artists such as Lady Gaga, Aretha Franklin, Gwen Stefani, Amy Winehouse, and more. Looking into the future, Nicollette Sullivan will release her third single, “Starchild”, on April 16th, and her full album will debut on May 21st.
